AUTHORIZATION FOR PERIPHERAL NERVE BLOCK PLACEMENT

A peripheral nerve block has been chosen by both your surgeon and anesthesiologist as a way to manage your pain after surgery. The following information outlines the type of block that has been indicated for your procedure. Your anesthesiologist, who is specially trained in performing this procedure, and is an independent practitioner and not an employee of Northwest Community Healthcare, will be placing the nerve block.

Though peripheral nerve blocks have a good safety record, all the listed blocks below have possible adverse effects of incomplete block, infection, bleeding, hematoma formation, adverse drug reaction, local anesthetic systemic toxicity, damage to nerve and/or surrounding structures. The duration of block may vary between patients and some motor and sensory deficits may last longer then expected.

Brachial Plexus block

This is performed to reduce post operative pain in the upper extremity. Possible specific adverse effects include but are not limited to dryness or numbness of the throat/facial region, hoarseness of the voice, redness of the eye, drooping of the eye lid, shortness of breath and rarely collapsed lung.

Femoral, Sciatic, Popliteal nerve block(s)

This is performed to reduce post operative pain in the lower extremity. This block(s) will reduce your sensation and muscle strength in your leg. You will be required to have a leg splint on at all times when standing or walking until full feeling and muscle strength has returned, otherwise a potential injury due to fall may occur.

_ Lumbar Plexus block

This is performed to reduce post operative pain in the hip and lower extremity. Possible specific adverse effects include but are not limited to hematoma of the retroperitoneal space, spread of local Anesthetic to epidural/subarachnoid space, hypotension, possible injury due to fail.

Transversus Abdominis Plane Block (TAP block)

This is performed to reduce post operative pain in the abdominal area. Possible adverse effects include inadvertent needle puncture of the peritoneal space or abdominal viscera, howel hematoms.

| Other regional nerve blocks:   | neal space or abdominal viscera, bowel hematoma.                                  |

DAY SURGERY CENTER PATIENTS

I received the Day Surgery Center brochure by mail outlining my Patient Rights and Advance Directive options.

I have received a copy of the Patient Rights and Responsibilities.

SHARING CONSENT

- To comply with the Federal Privacy rules, we request that a spokesperson be identified by the patient to be the primary contact to receive updates about the patient's condition. An alternate spokesperson(s) may be selected in case the primary spokesperson is not available. It is a requirement that both primary and alternate spokespersons have the patient's permission to receive protected health information as it relates to his/her care.
- Information requests via the telephone will be given only to an identified spokesperson on this written document.

Physician may share information about my procedure with the following individuals:

DAY SURGERY CENTER PATIENTS

I received the Day Surgery Center brochure by mail outlining my Patient Rights and Advance Directive options.

I have received a copy of the Patient Rights and Responsibilities.

SHARING CONSENT

- To comply with the Federal Privacy rules, we request that a spokesperson be identified by the patient to be the primary contact to receive updates about the patient's condition. An alternate spokesperson(s) may be selected in case the primary spokesperson is not available. It is a requirement that both primary and alternate spokespersons have the patient's permission to receive protected health information as it relates to his/her care.
- Information requests via the telephone will be given only to an identified spokesperson on this written document.

Physician may share information about my procedure with the following individuals:

Key Points to observe after hospital discharge:

- Begin to take your oral pain medication when you start to have feeling in your operative limb. 1) This will provide more effective pain relief than if you wait until the block wears off completely.
- Start taking your home medications as directed by your family physician or surgeon. 2)
- 3) You may notice a slight temperature difference between your "blocked" limb versus your other limbs. This is not unusual and is a normal occurrence for this type of anesthesia.

Upper Limb (Arm)

- The nerve block will wear off in about 6 24 hours. Until then, your arm and shoulder area 1) will be numb and weak. DO NOT lift or carry objects.
- Limit your activities until full feeling and strength have returned to avoid injury due to altered 2) sensation.
- If given an arm sling, wear sling until you have feeling and muscle strength to control your 3) arm or your surgeon tells you to remove it. This also is to prevent injury.

Lower Limb (Leg)

- 1) The nerve block will wear off in about 6 - 24 hours. Until then, your leg will be numb and weak. DO NOT try to bear weight on your leg or you might fall! When given a brace, wear it at all times that you are up and about, until your surgeon tells you otherwise.
- 2) Limit your activities until full feeling and muscle strength have returned to avoid injury due to altered sensation.
- 3) Use assistive devices such as crutches or a walker as ordered by your physician.

If you have redness or swelling at the injection site, metallic taste in your mouth, facial numbness or tingling, slurred speech, restlessness, or any question that is of concern please call the 847.618.7200 immediately and ask to talk to an anesthesiologist.

DSC OPERATIVE REPORT

DATE OF OPERATION: 07/09/2012

PREOPERATIVE DIAGNOSES:

Right cubital tunnel syndrome.

Right ulnar nerve injury at the forearm.

POSTOPERATIVE DIAGNOSES:

Right cubital tunnel syndrome.

Right ulnar nerve injury at the forearm.

PROCEDURES:

Right cubital tunnel release.

2. Right ulnar neurolysis at the forearm.

SURGEON: Scott Sagerman, MD.

: TMATEIRA Sam Biafora, MD.

COMPLICATIONS: None.

TOURNIQUET TIME: 1 hour.

FINDINGS: The right cubital tunnel showed thickening of the cubital tunnel ligament with scarring of the ulnar nerve to the floor of the cubital tunnel and local constriction. The nerve also appeared constricted at the flexor pronator aponeurosis at the distal aspect of the cubital tunnel. Also, a thick arcade of Struthers was present proximal to the cubital tunnel, though the ulnar nerve was not visibly constricted at this level.

The right forearm, the site of the previous chainsaw laceration revealed extension to the subcutaneous tissue and fascia overlying the flexor carpi ulnaris muscle. A piece of retained absorbable suture material was present. The muscle fibers were in intact. The ulnar nerve was intact beneath the muscle belly. There was no visible scarring around the ulnar nerve at this level.

DESCRIPTION OF PROCEDURE: Informed consent was obtained from the patient. Prophylactic IV antibiotic was given. He received medical clearance from his primary care physician. Regional block anesthetic was administered by the ARLINGTON HEIGHTS, ILLINOIS anesthesiologist in the right upper extremity. The right arm was prepped and draped sterilely. A sterile tourniquet was applied to the right upper arm, and it was elevated following exsanguination of the limb.

A longitudinal incision was made over the posteromedial aspect of the right elbow centered at the cubital tunnel. Under loupe magnification, the subcutaneous tissue was dissected. Superficial veins were ligated with bipolar cautery. A branch of the medial antebrachial cutaneous nerve was identified. This was gently retracted safely and protected. The fascia was incised proximal to the cubital tunnel, and the ulnar nerve was visualized. The cubital tunnel ligament was divided and completely released. The flexor pronator aponeurosis was also incised and released, and the nerve was dissected distally into the musculature where motor branches were identified. The release was then carried proximally, and the arcade of Struthers was divided and completely released. The ulnar nerve was inspected. The nerve was mobilized from adhesions with gentle blunt dissection. Nerve gliding was checked and found to be satisfactory. The ulnar nerve was stable at the cubital tunnel. The field was irrigated with antibiotic solution. The subcutaneous tissue was reapproximated with buried Vicryl sutures, and the skin edges were reapproximated with nylon sutures.

Attention was then directed to the forearm scar. A longitudinal incision was made over the ulnar aspect of the mid forearm centered at the site of the scar. Under loupe magnification, the subcutaneous tissue was dissected. The fascia was visualized. Superficial vein was ligated with bipolar cautery. The dermis was elevated off of the scarred fascia with blunt dissection. The retained suture material was removed. The muscle fibers were visualized and found to be in continuity. The ulnar nerve was exposed in the interval between the flexor digitorum and flexor carpi ulnaris muscle bellies. The nerve was dissected proximal and distal from the region of the laceration. The nerve was completely intact at this level with no visible scarring or adhesions. The field was irrigated with antibiotic solution. The subcutaneous tissue was reapproximated with buried Vicryl sutures, and the skin edges were reapproximated with nylon sutures.

A sterile bulky gauze dressing was applied. The tourniquet was deflated. Circulation returned to the right arm with normal capillary refill distally. The patient was transported to recovery in stable condition. He tolerated the procedure well. There were no complications. An arm sling was applied for protection.
