

From: Paul Dulberg Paul_Dulberg@comcast.net
Subject: Dulberg Dep - Sharp printing orders and revenues
Date: February 21, 2020 at 12:23 PM
To: Julia C. Williams juliawilliams@clintonlaw.net

PD

Hi Julia,

Sharp Printing customers and revenues when I left abruptly for 3 years and was in Florida and I was not tending to Sharp Printing Inc but left it up to Mike McArtor on very short notice.

Last night I had a conversation with Mike McArtor to piece together what exactly took place when I was gone.

Mike McArtor said to me that the only orders he fulfilled were the existing orders we had before I left for Florida and did not take on any new orders because he didn't know how to do the sales paperwork or order the supplies.

Being frustrated, Mike McArtor began telling everyone who called that we were not taking new orders at this time and over the next year just started telling people we went out of business so he didn't have to deal with it and they would stop calling.

This makes sense because Mike never handled any of the sales, ordering of supplies or corporate paperwork to file with the state before I left and one of the things I did do during the time I was gone was periodically call our usual suppliers to make sure they were paid while I was gone so if Mike needed to get ink or other supplies he could and they kept telling me there was no balance due on our account.

I had always assumed that Mike figured out how to write up a basic sales receipt and paid the suppliers with the block of pre-signed checks I had left for him thus took the jobs he thought he could do without me around but that wasn't the case. Mike just finished up the jobs he had and stopped everything new.

So there was not that number of "maybe 100 customers" I had guessed at during the deposition nor the number of "maybe above 20k but below 50k" in total revenues I guessed at.

There were no new orders and no new revenues.

Mike did continue to pay the utilities and what not but that was about it.

We can call Mike McArtor in for a deposition if the defense wants to hear it from him.

Mike only knew how to make screens, mix ink, run the press and learned a little bit of the adobe software from watching me work on stuff.

Please let me know the best way about getting the record amended.

Thanks,
Paul

From: Paul Dulberg Paul_Dulberg@comcast.net
Subject: Re: Dulberg Dep - Sharp printing orders and revenues
Date: February 21, 2020 at 3:12 PM
To: The Clinton Law Firm juliawilliams@clintonlaw.net

PD

Hi Julia

I just remembered what I did do since I was back from Florida and the time of the chainsaw accident that showed my intentions to keep sharp printing inc open once I got back on my feet and was taking steps in that direction.

I re-upped the domain name <http://www.sharpprintinginc.com> for another 10 years from go daddy.

It is still active today but I had taken down the home page as you can see shortly after the accident but I can turn it back on for a bit just to show that I am the administrator and I do own the site.

Also, if you want to see the part of the site that is still up and has been continuously use this link
<http://www.sharpprintinginc.com/911/>

Please don't judge the content on the back end of the site. It was a research project I helped out on and had nothing to do with Sharp Printing Inc.

I don't usually share that link with anyone.

Don't know if this helps to show my intentions or not.

Paul

On Feb 21, 2020, at 12:23 PM, Paul Dulberg <Paul_Dulberg@comcast.net> wrote:

Hi Julia,

Sharp Printing customers and revenues when I left abruptly for 3 years and was in Florida and I was not tending to Sharp Printing Inc but left it up to Mike McArtor on very short notice.

Last night I had a conversation with Mike McArtor to piece together what exactly took place when I was gone.

Mike McArtor said to me that the only orders he fulfilled were the existing orders we had before I left for Florida and did not take on any new orders because he didn't know how to do the sales paperwork or order the supplies.

Being frustrated, Mike McArtor began telling everyone who called that we were not taking new orders at this time and over the next year just started telling people we went out of business so he didn't have to deal with it and they would stop calling.

This makes sense because Mike never handled any of the sales, ordering of supplies or corporate paperwork to file with the state before I left and one of the things I did do during the time I was gone was periodically call our usual suppliers to make sure they were paid while I was gone so if Mike needed to get ink or other supplies he could and they kept telling me there was no balance due on our account.

I had always assumed that Mike figured out how to write up a basic sales receipt and paid the suppliers with the block of pre-signed checks I had left for him thus took the jobs he thought he could do without me around but that wasn't the case. Mike just finished up the jobs he had and stopped everything new.

So there was not that number of "maybe 100 customers" I had guessed at during the deposition nor the number of "maybe above 20k but below 50k" in total revenues I guessed at.

There were no new orders and no new revenues.

Mike did continue to pay the utilities and what not but that was about it.

We can call Mike McArtor in for a deposition if the defense wants to hear it from him.

Mike only knew how to make screens, mix ink, run the press and learned a little bit of the adobe software from watching me work on stuff.

Please let me know the best way about getting the record amended.

Thanks,
Paul

From: Paul Dulberg Paul_Dulberg@comcast.net
Subject: Re: Dulberg Dep - Sharp printing orders and revenues
Date: February 21, 2020 at 3:27 PM
To: The Clinton Law Firm juliawilliams@clintonlaw.net

PD

This link is to the time machine of all websites <https://web.archive.org/web/20130619111520/http://sharpprintinginc.com/>

It is called the wayback machine

In here you can see that I did not take down the home page until 2013

Paul

On Feb 21, 2020, at 3:12 PM, Paul Dulberg <Paul_Dulberg@comcast.net> wrote:

Hi Julia

I just remembered what I did do since I was back from Florida and the time of the chainsaw accident that showed my intentions to keep sharp printing inc open once I got back on my feet and was taking steps in that direction.

I re-upped the domain name <http://www.sharpprintinginc.com> for another 10 years from go daddy.

It is still active today but I had taken down the home page as you can see shortly after the accident but I can turn it back on for a bit just to show that I am the administrator and I do own the site.

Also, if you want to see the part of the site that is still up and has been continuously use this link
<http://www.sharpprintinginc.com/911/>

Please don't judge the content on the back end of the site. It was a research project I helped out on and had nothing to do with Sharp Printing Inc.

I don't usually share that link with anyone.

Don't know if this helps to show my intentions or not.

Paul

On Feb 21, 2020, at 12:23 PM, Paul Dulberg <Paul_Dulberg@comcast.net> wrote:

Hi Julia,

Sharp Printing customers and revenues when I left abruptly for 3 years and was in Florida and I was not tending to Sharp Printing Inc but left it up to Mike McArtor on very short notice.

Last night I had a conversation with Mike McArtor to piece together what exactly took place when I was gone.

Mike McArtor said to me that the only orders he fulfilled were the existing orders we had before I left for Florida and did not take on any new orders because he didn't know how to do the sales paperwork or order the supplies.

Being frustrated, Mike McArtor began telling everyone who called that we were not taking new orders at this time and over the next year just started telling people we went out of business so he didn't have to deal with it and they would stop calling.

This makes sense because Mike never handled any of the sales, ordering of supplies or corporate paperwork to file with the state before I left and one of the things I did do during the time I was gone was periodically call our usual suppliers to make sure they were paid while I was gone so if Mike needed to get ink or other supplies he could and they kept telling me there was no balance due on our account.

I had always assumed that Mike figured out how to write up a basic sales receipt and paid the suppliers with the block of pre-signed checks I had left for him thus took the jobs he thought he could do without me around but that wasn't the case. Mike just finished up the jobs he had and stopped everything new.

So there was not that number of "maybe 100 customers" I had guessed at during the deposition nor the number of "maybe above 20k but below 50k" in total revenues I guessed at.

There were no new orders and no new revenues.

Mike did continue to pay the utilities and what not but that was about it.

We can call Mike McArtor in for a deposition if the defense wants to hear it from him.

Mike only knew how to make screens, mix ink, run the press and learned a little bit of the adobe software from watching me work on stuff.

Please let me know the best way about getting the record amended.

Thanks

